HEAT AND DIVORCE.

Since June 1 the "Simpatico" papers have lost nearly three applications for divorce in married but recently-separated for the five months preceding that time. The attorney of Tolosa's seems the extremely hot weather has this large increase in married troubles and the human nature expert of the Kansas City star bears out the conclusion.

With the temperature above 80 many little additional heats are needed to set off the rise and produce an explosion. Under ordinary conditions a husband's failure to mail an invitation until a day or two after the party is an exaggerating offense that it may be forgotten. With the mercury soaring however it becomes pretty nearly impermissible. A man will generally overlook neglect to send the invitation on his first, not even when the thermometer is recording close to 80.

The other sorts of daily life incidents merely give an explosive torque to existence. My husband and I never had an unpleasant word," assured an afflicted woman in the presence of a venerable and famous minister. "I thank God, madam," was his reply "that life of my wife and myself has not been so monotonous now."

But in formal matters these disagreements are magnified out of all proportions. Unfortunately in many instances causes for divorce develop out of the merest trivialities. The courts might be more cognizant of the temperature out of which divorce storms grow.

It may be expected that the weather forecaster will become an important witness in suits for separation.

"This suit," the judge will say, "was filed Monday, June 27. Will the forecaster kindly state weather conditions" of the preceding day?

"Sunday, June 26," the forecaster will reply. "Maximum temperature 100 degrees; excessive humidity; the night was the most sultry in the history of the weather bureau."

"Case dismissed," will be the verdict, no possible. "The court hereby orders you to remove to New Mexico where the climate is more congenial. There is no reason in the world why the parties to this suit should not go to a good climate and live happily."

It is only common sense that most of the divorce suits of June, 1911, were due chiefly to the weather and not to the faults of the persons concerned. And in such cases even the "rule of reason" should apply.

A DIFFERENCE.

How different things are in the white house. Testifying before the Senate investigating committee, attorney Mr. Hines of Chicago asserted that President Taft wanted Mr. Lovett ousted and that he threatened to work to help elect Mr. Taft.

Then comes a demand from the white house. The demand simply places in a few short lines that the statement of Mr. Hines is without foundation in fact—a polite way of saying that Mr. Hines had not acted particularly about his use of the truth.

Watermelons are here on the market. At least some green, oblong mandarins that look like watermelons and do everything except taste like watermelons are being offered for sale.

That demented mother in Texas who sent the threats of her children and then hanged herself was the victim of circumstances. She had no home in Texas and was one way there for her to do.

Train wrecks in France were a massacre train into the high seas—no, but no one was hurt. What kind of nonsense and what sort of nonsense have they got in France, my how!

The result that only comes at table since the state department is used to the missing money from the U.S. treasury. Diplomatic expenses in China, you see, good. In fact, it was slightly better.

PLURAL MARRIAGES.

Joseph Smith, head of the Mormon church, husband of two wives and father of 43 children, says the greatest argument against plural marriages is the high cost of living.

The president ought to know, in fact, on mature deliberation, he ought to be the highest authority.

Any man who can support like wife and 43 children is living well.

The average man, Mormons also prescribes may present

one may legitimate wife,

but President Smith

wife and father of

as friends has proposed. The result being much off balance. In advertising freedom all the silliness resulting from expectation.

There are hundreds of plural marriage becoming popular. A few plagues might make a version of it and then thousands and then thousands more would follow. There are many who are the professors of increased wage should President Smith but knows He doesn't have to prove it.

A GOOD IDEA.

The proposition to erect a great arch in New York bearing the name "Simpatico" which would be much used by the millions of people passing by this city is an excellent idea. It should be taken up and pursued. As an advertising proposition it would be a great thing for New York, both during the time the simple contest was on and after the arch was erected.

This proposition has been submitted by a number of citizens large and small and they have all found it a useful investment. This is nothing but good for America so to all means let us have the arch and the best slogan chosen that any bright-minded citizen can suggest.

In referring that no fruit be sold which has not first passed a sanitarian's inspection in a fruit inspection on the floor of the Senate fruit commissioners have gone a long way toward White House fruit is of a high quality there are always some specimens of the tree product which are unfit for sale and in the handling of such specimens down the market the general high standard of quality maintained by the orchards may be injured. An inspection not only provides for preventing the sale of fruit unfit for consumption but will advertise Rosedale in the foreign markets as a fruit center.

There seems to be an epidemic of bone finding in this territory and Arizona. Only consider the recent excavations in the Santa Fe plaza. Found a few skeletons of prehistoric men and a few days ago the Phoenix hospital said was the same of a similar find. One present day skeptic is well preserved but their age and their origin must have been a great surprise.

George Armitage of Santa Fe is going to represent Dr. Veritas on July 4. We hope that Dr. Veritas, for our best and most useful services

What and Masons, Murphy and their wife with those same parts after the operation was over.

The Associated Press dispatches yesterday give the opinions of a Massachusetts judge on what constitutes the rights of husband and wife in the home.

The same man who now and then laughingly in the editorial columns of the Herald acts an authority on the subject and in order to argue both sides to the controversy he called the lecture, the new woman who now and then a few short pages and then again set forth the opposite views on this same subject.

Yesterday a judge of Springfield, Massachusetts, declined to entertain a suit in action in his court, and in doing so set down a few rules concerning law for life that are not clearly understood in this modern day. The first and most prominent among them is the set of rules which he handed this rather delicate question. These are in reasonable proportion, however, with this judge's view of the law.

If the husband wants his meals he should get them on time and if he wants to be home, we should know considerably more than just how to leave the family, according to him.

That Springfield judge here while he is about the law, he is about untried life. There are some women who could change his views for him in a short time and if it is too bad he is married, then he hasn't got that kind of a woman.

The woman of today has such a position in the home and elsewhere that she is using to keep a more balanced edge on me. The husband of today wants to realize it and if it is not his needs, it is his own fault.

There is undoubtedly a great deal of interest over these Howard Yule last news back in New Mexico but to the majority of the persons concerned in such cases except the "rule of reason" should apply.

There is a lesson in the silence of J. P. Morgan concerning the wireless instruments. Mr. Morgan declines to discuss them. It is wise never to make known this is the time and when it comes to anything nation Mr. Morgan has them all sacked off the boards in seeing it first.

Senate Committee declares that the bill proposed by the Senate last gave the railroads control of the revenue. Now if Mr. Taft can show how to use these words without his predecessor, what an elegant answer he would have.
